At the Women's Assembly of the 8th General Assembly of World Forum of Fisher Peoples (WFFP) in Brasília, Brazil, fisherwomen leaders from around the world emphasised the urgent need for training and capacity building to strengthen our cooperatives and integrate efforts that reinforce our territories, leadership, and political education.

Facing the challenges of patriarchy, extractivism, industrial expansion, capitalism, regressive government policies and violence, the fisherwomen leaders highlighted the importance of collective action as a way to make our voices heard.

We demand recognition of our identity, agency and rights. The historical rights of the fisher peoples and our rights as women - particularly in health, we call for structural transformation necessary to ensure our collective well-being and that of our communities.

Through solidarity and organization, we are building strategies to resist and reclaim our spaces, asserting our vital role in shaping the future of fisher peoples and coastal territories.
